BOBCAT '71

Paper smiles left out in the rain, brought to school with notebooks and pencils. For a moment I saw stifling September mornings turn into crisp autumn days. This year came at a time in my life when I was trying to sift a me out of the New Morality and A. C. T.

Hearts torn apart with the removal of three silver letters and a chain.
Sometimes put back together again, sometimes left out in the hall to be trampled with scattered books and papers.
Our smiles made us seem real, important.
But hidden away behind the smiles and words of wisdom
we were alone.
We searched, and found the needed drive to push us forward, and then we found ourselves.

Days were never dull. I just couldn't help being involved, if in nothing else, then in spirit.

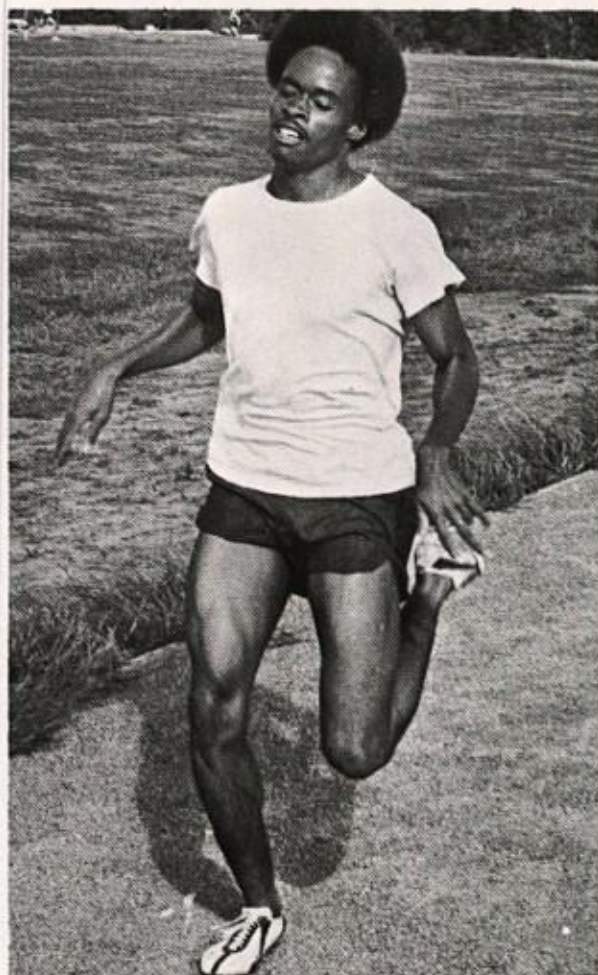

For the first time I belonged, not because I had to, but because I wanted to.

It was kind of involvement that meant more than just paying dues and getting hit up for money.

I was someone, I was me, and I belonged.

Respect for the other guy,
that's what we learned.
Through practices blinded by sweat, we stopped for a moment of rest, only to go back to training again.
We had to show our opposition
what we could do.
We had to prove our team was best.

Our object was to learn, to discover.

Finding things that were always there, yet unknown.

Always learning, we saw that our answers only presented new problems;
and when we were through, we found that we had only begun.

Most things about this school will be forgotten;
my locker combination,
mimeographed hall passes,
the room number of my second hour class;
but a few things will always be with me, caught up in my mind, to be brought out one-by-one in passing conversations.
Things to be taken out, sorted, and filed away once more . . .
faces,
feelings,
fading moments.
Somehow, somewhere, these things will be remembered because . . .

I've been here before.

I was there to learn,
to turn dreams
into reality;
to make shadows
into things
I could touch.

I knew there was more than learning,
I had a personal goal
to accomplish.

Football tees,
track courses,
wrestling mats,
all blended to form my memories of sports.

Dances, coronations,
prom bids,
gave us our
social fulfillment;
And as sparks of light
caught our memories
in a camera . . .

We found ourselves.

Student Life

Finding friends . . . new fads . . . setting goals . . . year begins

"Klackers" or two plastic balls on a string provided hours of frustration and entertainment for Star-Spencer's students. Some people couldn't "even" get the two balls to hit each other, while some hit anyone standing close. But, a few mastered it and took their place alongside Frisbee experts to become the undisputed Klacker Champion.

Cheerleaders had a particular talent for shaming themselves and sports boys in pep assembly skits. These skits did more to generate spirit than all the signs and ribbons could have done. After these assemblies a game of pool was in for boys who represented their school on fields, courts, and cross-country tracks.

Athletics was very important to the student body, it gave them a sense of accomplishment and pride. Early in the mornings and after school, guys covered in gray sweat suits were seen jogging around the school, with hopes of "making the team."

Spilling out onto the grounds, students assembled to watch the Homecoming parade. Homecoming, one big event pieced together with small remembrances. Remembering, being cut to shreds by the chicken wire base of a car float. Recalling, tying balloons and crepe paper to signs and hoping they wouldn't blow away before the game.

Homecoming, its' creativity and enthusiasm, started Oct. 2, and lasted through the school year. Shoe polish on car windows continued through the seasons.

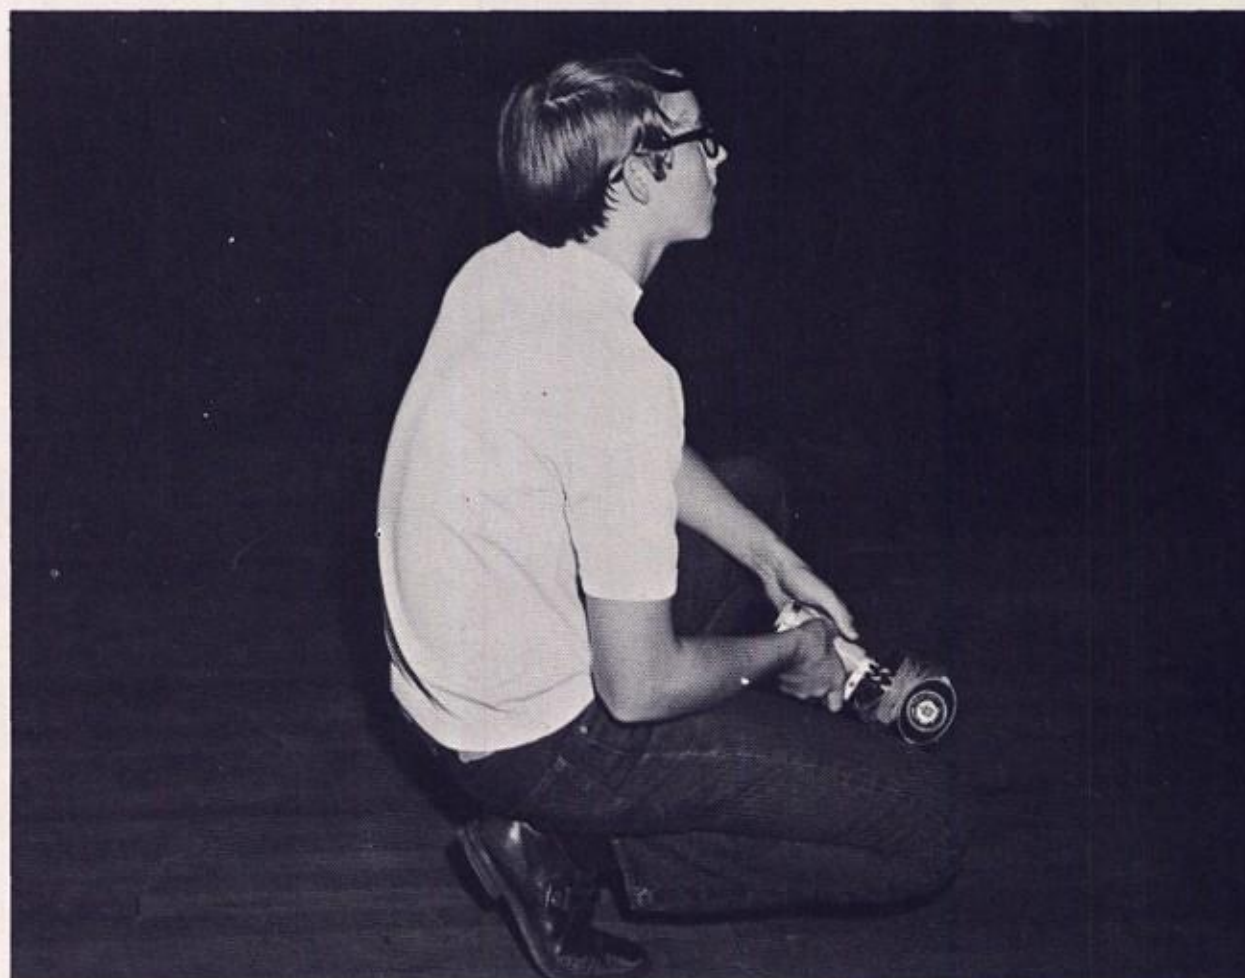

As hard as three bleachers worth of fans prayed and yelled it seems like the Bobcats should have won their Homecoming game. They didn't.

In the winter section of most yearbooks one entire introductory paragraph is faithfully dedicated to "swirling flakes" and "students frolicking in the snow." Star-Spencer's students wore short sleeves in January, but this didn't repress any frolicking.

Gingerbread men and cardboard plaques of toys sparkled on the walls of the cafeteria as Pep Club girls and their dates participated in the annual Pep Club Christmas Dance.

Through the caring of student Ramona French, names of students promising to write Christmas letters to men in Vietnam, were solicited.

Cold weather . . . teens together in religion . . . reviewing our heritages

Winter showed its' force only once this past year; efforts silently and quickly melted away and its' passing was barely noticed by those caught up in winter activities.

Formed late in the winter months, Teen Chapel soon came to be recognized as one of Star-Spencer's leading tickets. This contemporary religious organization offered spiritual involvement for students of all denominations.

Black Heritage Week came through as one of the leading programs of the year. "Black Heritage" built a theme around informing students of the role blacks have played in our nation's history. The weeks' activities were climaxed with an assembly and the selection of David Linden and Brenda Brown as Mr. and Miss Black Heritage.

Conference champs . . .

first acting attempts

February and March created their own in-between season of not quite winter and almost spring. During this season the annual Talent Show came about. Original songs and dance routines typified the material presented by a portion of the students; the rest were too chicken to get up there.

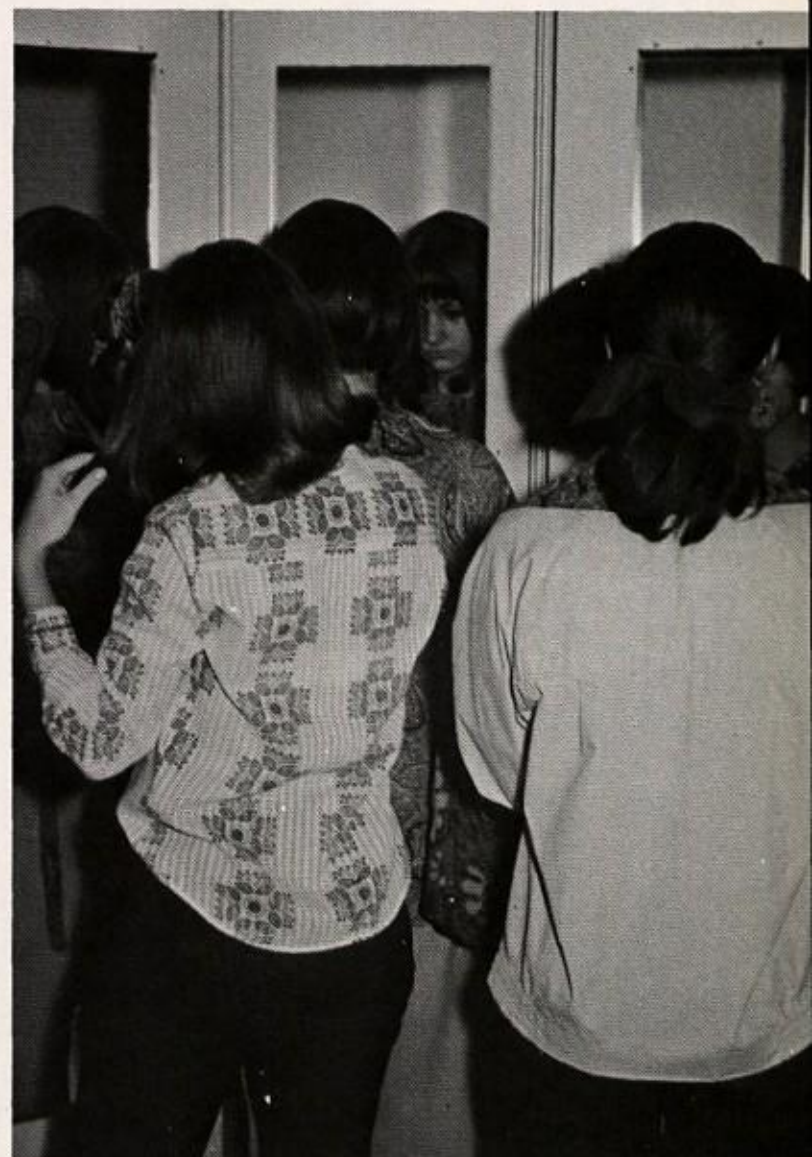

Winning the coveted title of conference champs during a meet at Classen was the Bobcat wrestling team.

Spring finally made it in the form of kite flying and various things that were done for no reason except that they were fun. This "just for the joy of it" feeling prevailed through the Freshman play, and a McCalls' fashion show.

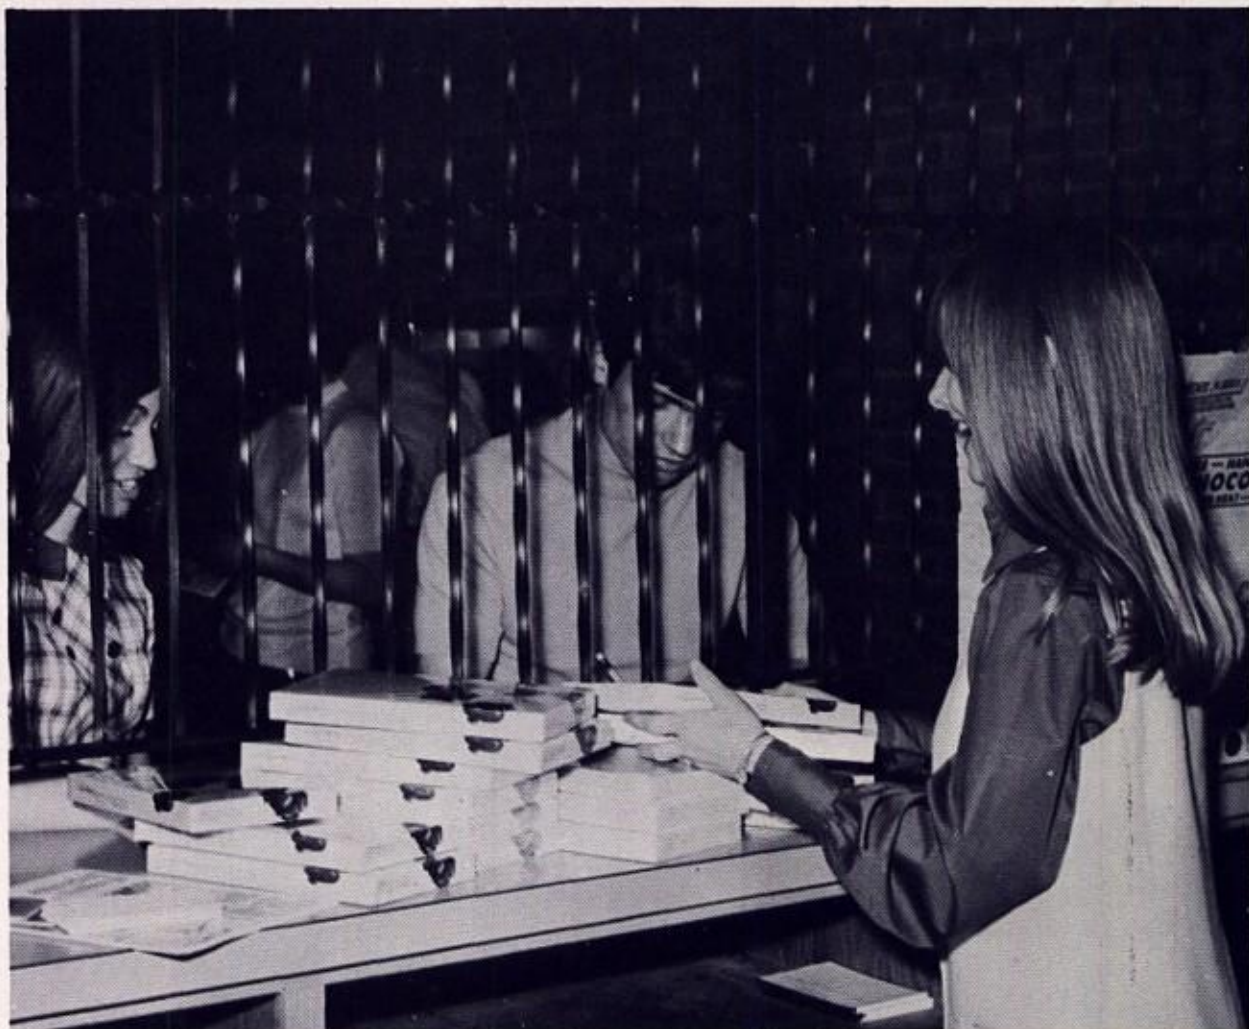

'Rest Assured', the all Freshman play, scored an immediate hit when it was presented. Besides filling out the cast, Freshmen assisted with lights and stage production

Spring made its debut with Spring fever lurking behind every corner. Along with the season's change came an abundance of student activity.

Through their combined efforts, Art Club members produced psychedelic posters which they displayed in the library and later placed on sale.

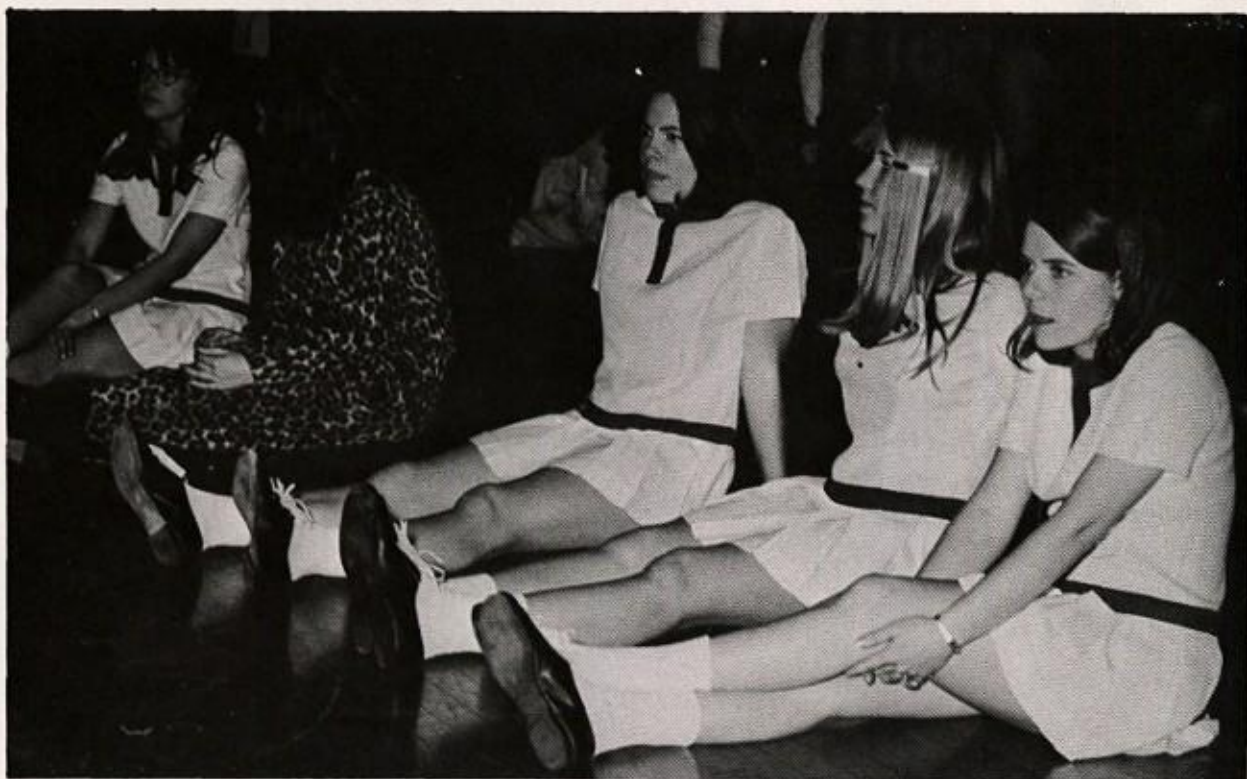

New Pep Club members went through two miserable days of initiation. Pin curls, gym suits, and bunny ears were only a few of the shameful requirements.

"Polywogs," more commonly known as chocolates, were sold by industrious Honor Society members in their attempt to raise money for their scholarship fund.

Students were informed of future careers and opportunities in the medical field during an assembly Wednesday, February 24th. Paige Pfeifer from the Department of Health was guest speaker. He also performed songs.

Prom preparations . . . shaping up for summer . . . receiving diplomas

Summer was on its way by April and a lot of people were already living it in their minds. Announcements and commencement practice pushed seniors close to graduation while warm weather made them wish it was all over, and made them wish it was summer. But they were yet to receive their honors and round out their high school years with one more prom, one more election, and one more test.

As Bobette and Bobette Beau Carla Twidwell and Gary Valdez represented Pep Club's spirit and drive. Carla has been a cheerleader all through high school and head cheerleader her senior year. Gary was active in football and newspaper. Both seniors will be remembered and next years class will undoubtedly try to live up to their example.

The year's end found junior and senior girls planning for the night of the prom. But prom night brought many unique moments that couldn't be planned, the kind of spontaneous memory laden moments that would fill their summer.

I could win . . .
I could win
with the team.
I could win
with myself.
I could win
with God.

It took muscles
and time.
And for every minute of the game
there were 24 hours of practice.

The stuffy locker room;
the sweat
mixed with tears;
the never-ending competition.

It almost made me give up.
I almost quit.
But I stayed.

And as a part of the Bobcat team
I could win . . .
we did win.

Leading the returning trackmen are seniors David Linden, Herman Burge, Richard Ivey, and Mike Kelly, and juniors Mark Harbison, and Kim Warne and Kenny Wilson.

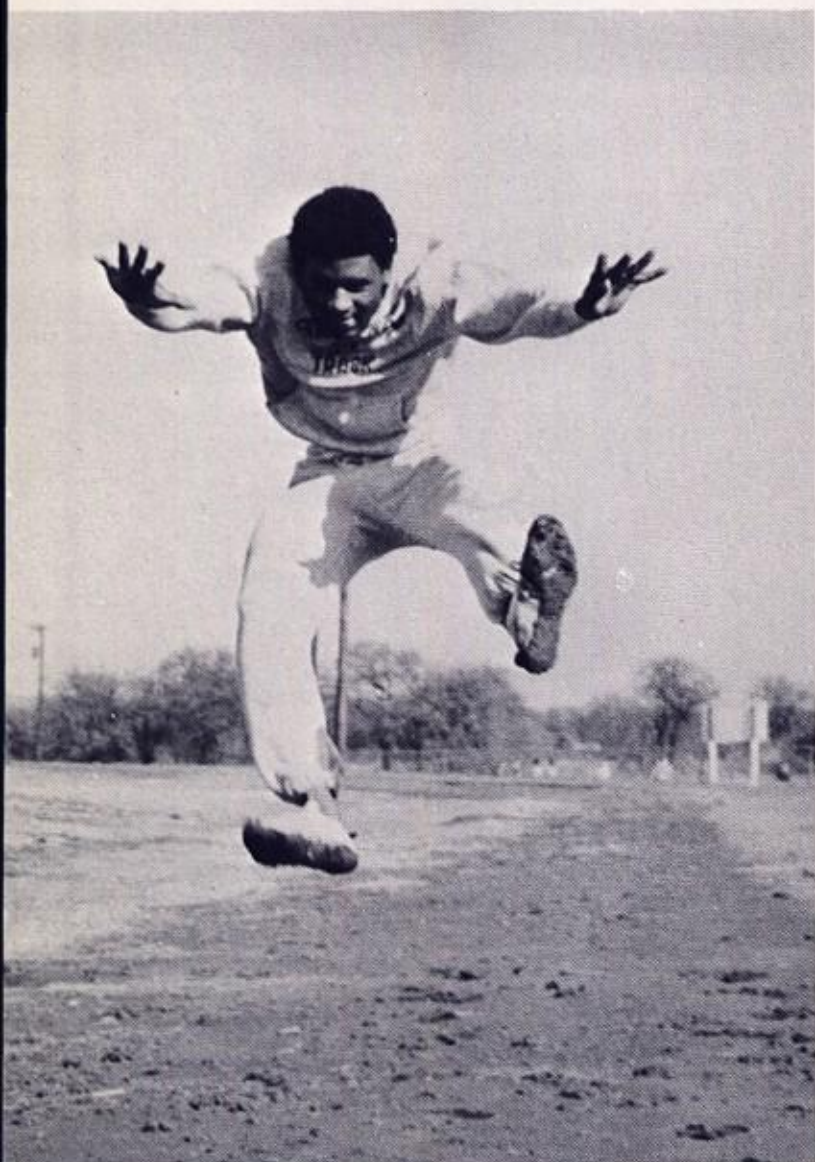

Linden and Warne placed third and fifth in the state cross-country meet and are the mainstays of the Bobcat distance events.

Several newcomers are heavily counted on by Rehl to help in the field events and relays.

Kim Warne, Jim Watkins, Mike Clary (background, with pole). Bobcat track team began practices in February.

Long jumping for the Bobcats is junior Alvin Hogg, grimacing with determination.

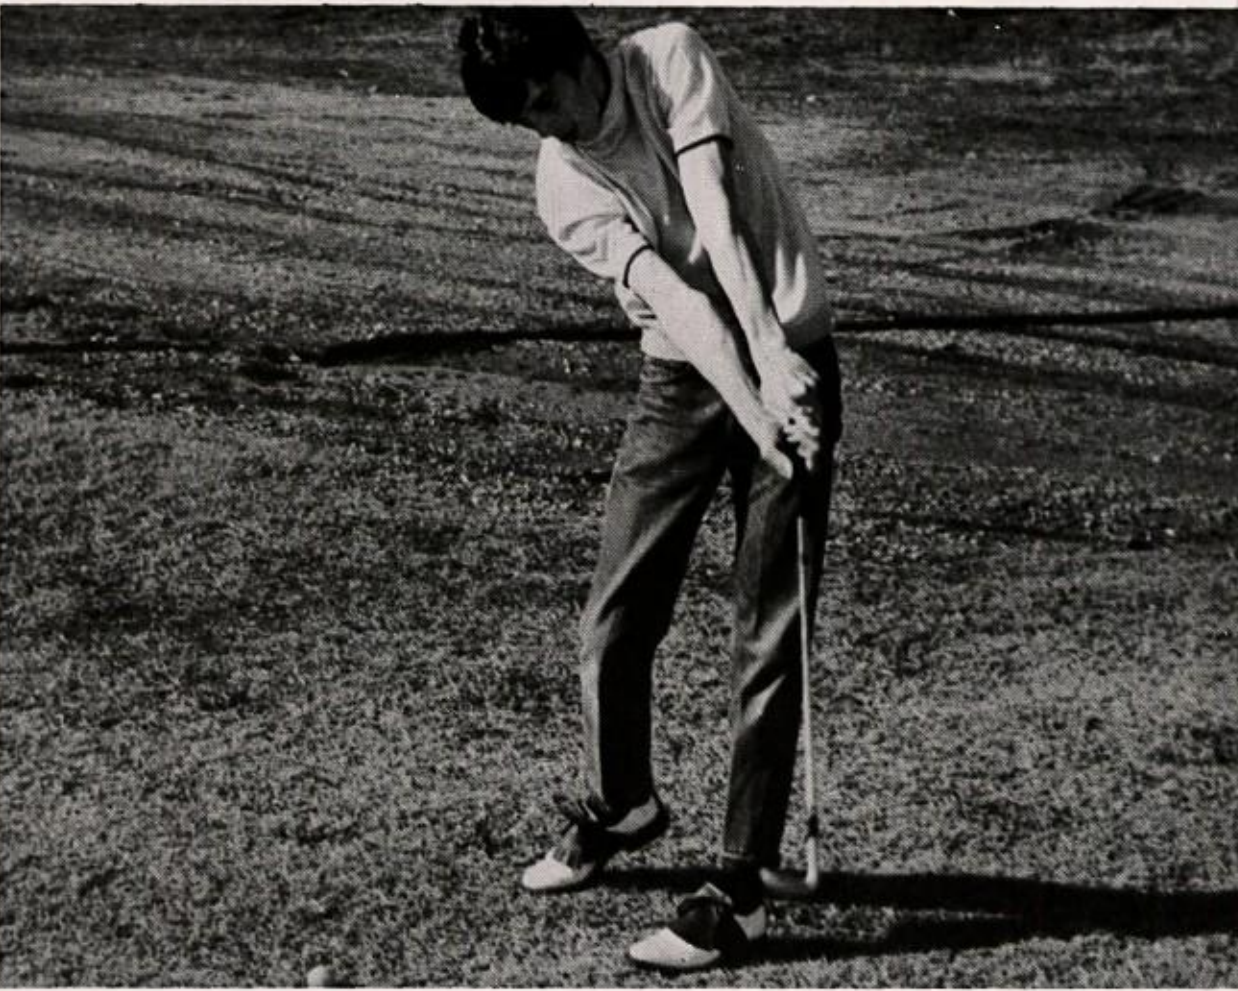

Seniors Otis Dubose and Jim Watkins go through their daily routine of running low hurdles in preparation for upcoming track and field meets in the state.

Three golfers back . . . bolster hopes of Coach Carl Smith, school . . .

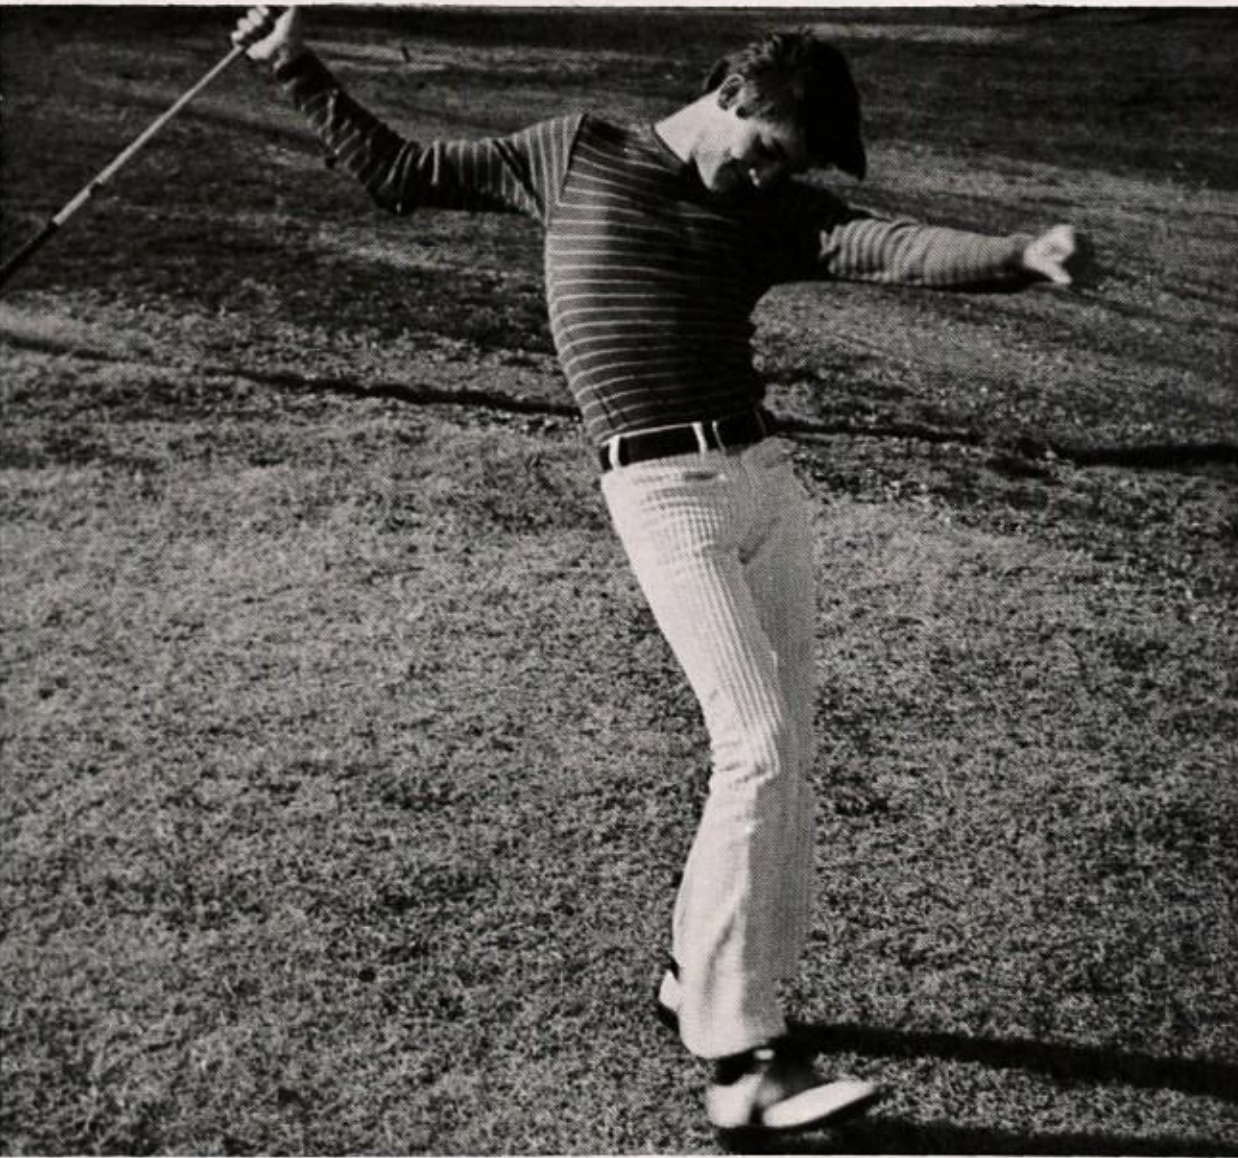

Three lettermen return from last year's Bobcat golf team, which won its first two matches in two years of existence, defeating Douglass and McGuinness.

Seniors Randy Goodman and David Holland and junior Craig Anderson are the three returning starters for Coach Carl Smith's golf squad.

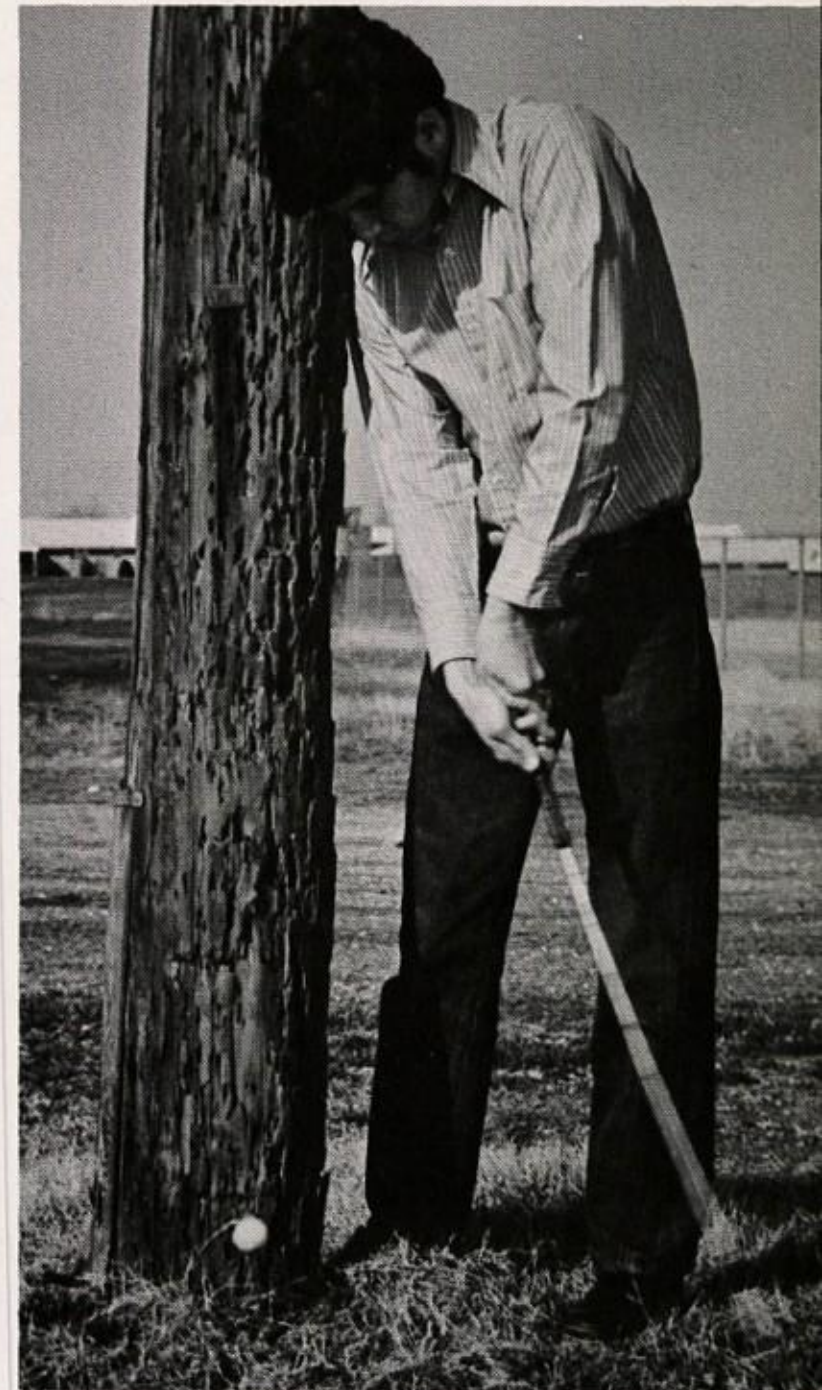

Coach Smith fills the vacancy left this year by the resignation of Carl Twidell, who reigned during the team's first two seasons.

Senior Randy Goodman takes a practice swing, before teeing off at an after-school practice session. Randy is a three year letterman in both wrestling and golf.

Junior Craig Anderson decides to give up his golfing career, and break the habit, as well as his nine-iron, after a practice round in the S-SHS parking lot.

I saw youth enjoying life.

For once I could see

I could see myself

Steps to better school

W. C. Fields and Spanky came back from childhood memories with a little help from Student Council and "Old Time Movies Night."

As Student Council president, Rick Young, sr., created interest in his school and carried a load of classes at Oklahoma Bible College.

Inter-city Student Council Day began with a swapping of delegates from each Oklahoma City School and ended with the beginnings of understanding modern education.

Collecting the first few cans for the "Food Drive" are members: R. Smith, S. Roy,

Scholars of top marks

. . . Achieving honors through wit, intellect

Mu Alpha Theta, Honor Society, Quill and Scroll; all clubs were a talent had to be expressed before membership was granted, willingness to be involved.

Mu Alpha Theta led Christmas activities with their presentation of the motion picture "Gambit." Admission to the movie cost students one useable toy.

Keeping Honor Society members busy this year was the owning and maintenance of Star-Spencer's Student Store. President David Crisp took charge of the store's back inventories and for the first time in years it produced a profit.

As service projects for their school, Quill and Scroll sponsored student directories and a brunch for the faculty during the Christmas holidays.

Forgotten memories

... books change ...

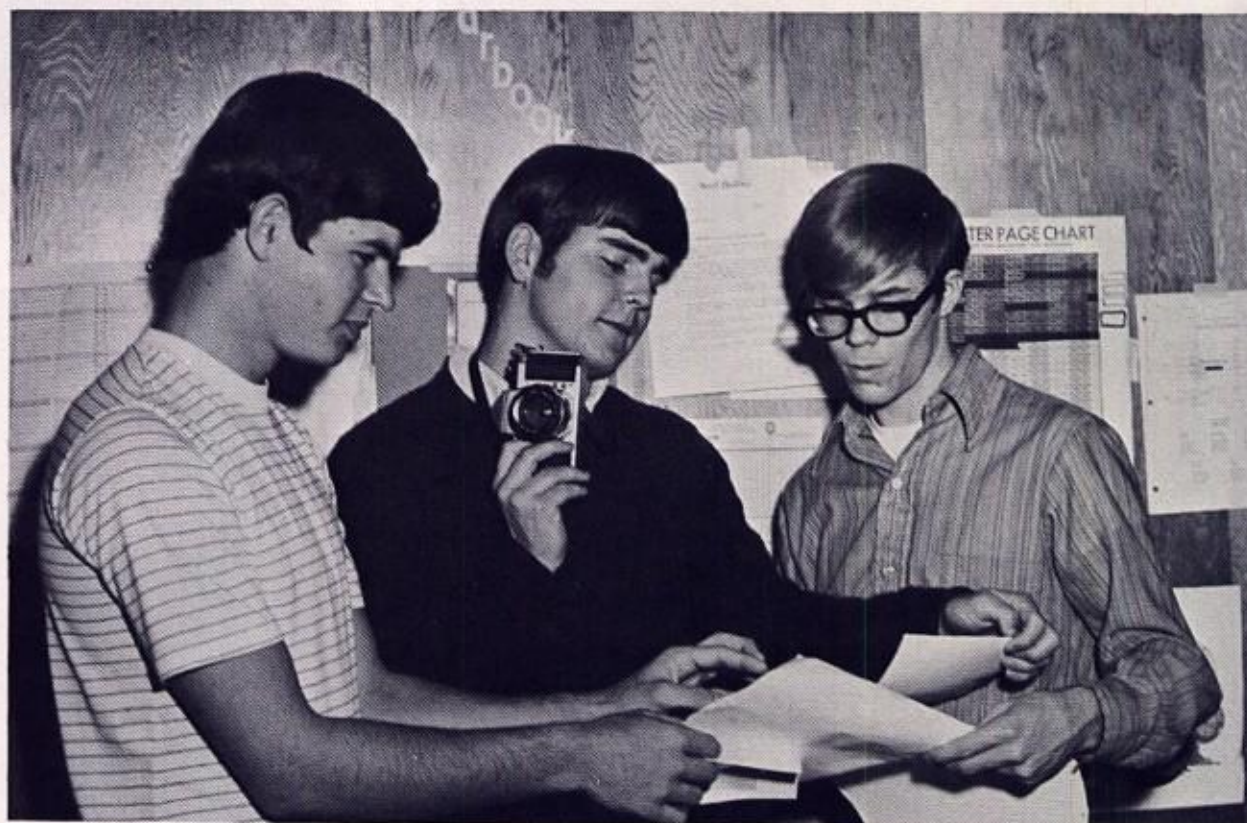

A year is recorded

Twenty people collecting the memories of 1,100—that was the Bobcat yearbook staff. Organized chaos is a way to describe the staff.

Although elaborate charts and graphs adorned the walls of the journalism room the quickest way to get information was to yell a lot.

Despite the yelling and the deadlines and getting on the D.N.A., they stayed together and gradually pieced together a year as it went by. Pieces of the year were caught up in cameras, typewriters, and phone calls.

Piatt's hamburgers and talks about boyfriend problems, during deadlines every three months, helped to tide the staff over. Early curfews often stretched to midnight.

Reading final galleys

. . . A part of S-S life

Trying to think of questions for an interview and driving to the printer's in Edmond adds up to being on the Bobcat Banner Staff.

Photographers braved freezing sidelines of the football field to contribute to the extensive coverage of 1970's Homecoming.

Heating water in coffee pots for developing fluid and then cooling it with ice was part of printing.

With deadlines already a major headache for Journalism II students, the numerous six-page newspapers may have been the cause of quite a few sleepy-eyed staffers. But the reception these papers received from the student body made it well worth the work.

Looking at exchange newspapers for new ideas in layouts and page designs are Ban-

Hectic practice sessions ... Characterizing ... Plays become a reality

Chains overhead churned and slowly pulled back the weight of the curtains, not until then did true seriousness hit the cast of "Pillow Talk."

Rented furniture and one of the most complicated sets ever presented at Star-Spencer helped make Mr. Ed Dowty's third play a success. Also helping were machine cokes with no ice, a script hidden on stage, and red dots that didn't come off for days.

Poor Zuider Zee waitresses! They tried so hard to keep their restaurant intact during a cast party that netted three glasses, a salt shaker, and some silverware.

Money netted helped the Thespians pay for a new audio-camera.

Thespians, drama arts

During the 1970-71 school year Thespians presented Star-Spencer with three plays, two contest winners and helped purchase a Video-Tape machine for the entire school's use.

Going to regionals were Rick Young, sr., and Rebecca Patton, sr., for placing third at contest for their humorous duet of "Star Spangled Girl". Also placing third in a dramatic duet were Shirley Williams, soph., and Jimmi Terrell, soph., for their cutting from "The Miracle Worker."

The Video-Tape machine is a device to record a T.V. show or a speaker and be able to play it back to other audiences. Thespians is paying half of the cost due to the fact that the machine will be frequently used by this organization.

Planning future career ... Selling programs, a fund-raising project

Dealing in the future can be very tricky, but when present hopes are strong, organizations appear that prepare hopes for a coming reality.

Future Homemakers of America and Future Teachers of America prepared ambitious young people for an active life in home and classrooms.

Curtains, vacuums and magazine racks were combined by F.H.A. girls to create dreams of homes to come.

Selling ten cent programs at the basketball games started the authority-student relationships that Future Teachers of America will have to cope with at a higher level soon.

Initiation banquets . . . Knowledge is gained in many various fields

Future Business Leaders of America learned the challenge of competition with the advent of F.B.L.A.'s Powder Puff football game.

Maps, directions from their dads and pre-planned introductions were all trappings surrounding the state-wide F.B.L.A. convention. Hosted by the Cametlot Inn of Tulsa, this annual convention created the types of temporary friendships that are remembered for years.

Sponsoring a Science Fair at Rogers Middle School kept Science Club members busy when their planning a break from activities took the form of a camp out early in Spring.

Deciding on vocations for their future careers

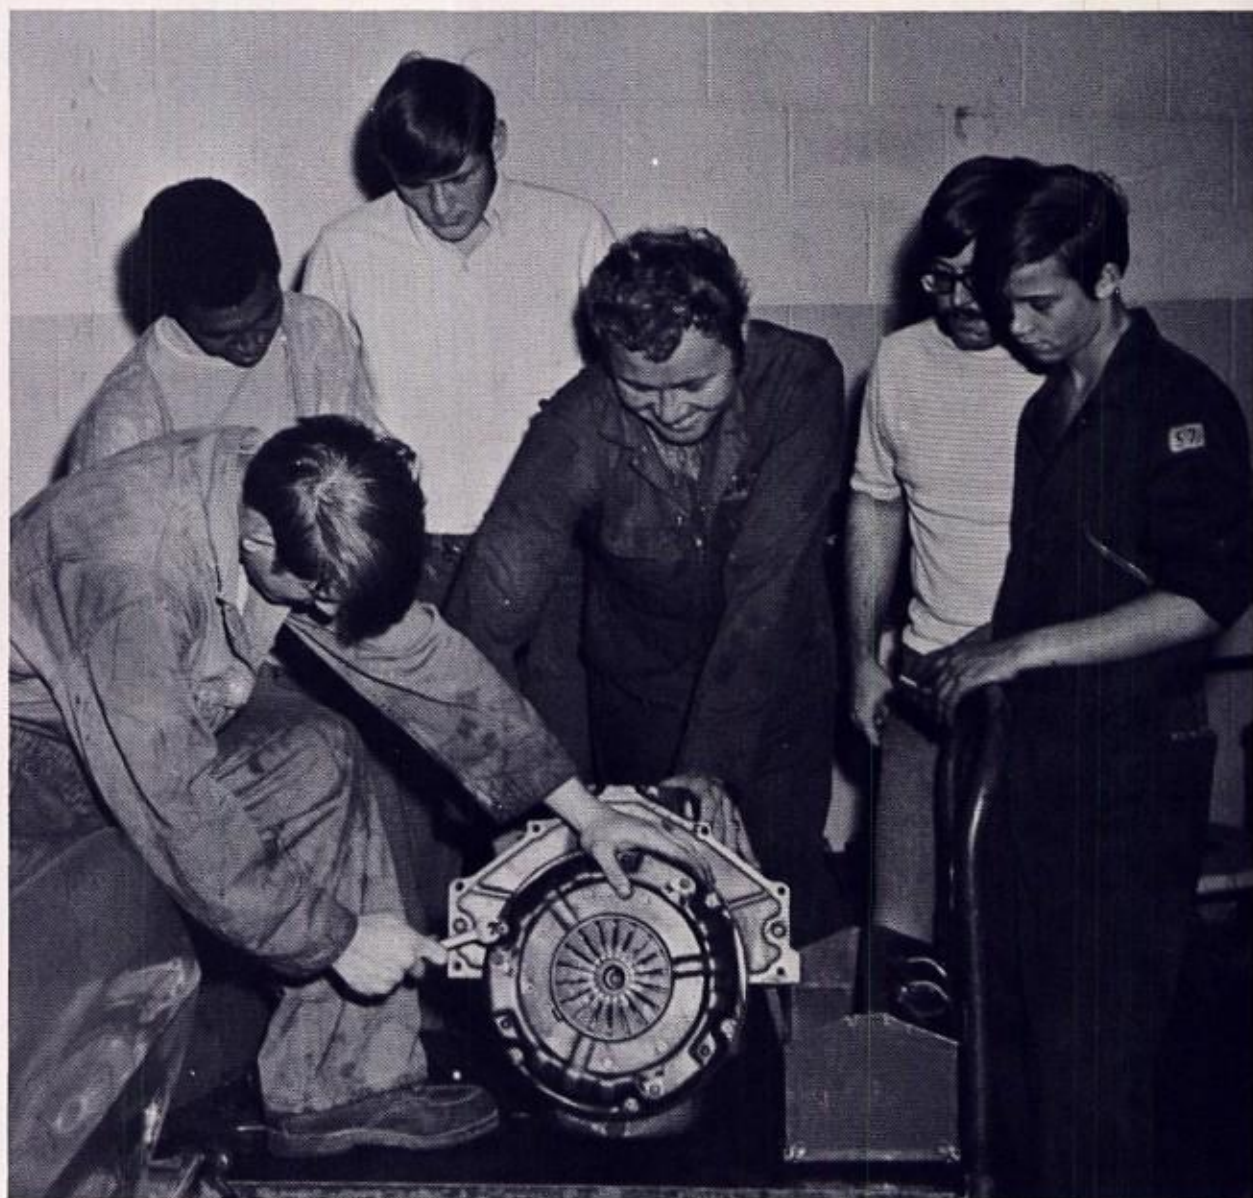

Sponsoring a Safety Week early in the Spring semester was the main service project of V.I.C.A. Posters and essays characterized the safety campaign carried out under the leadership of president Judy Parsons.

Auto Mechanics resulted in hopelessly strained coveralls, mounds of grease, and parts, thousands of parts with names to remember; also a skill. Interest in machines resulted in a career prospect for members.

Careers in electronics and related fields were the goal of members of Star-Spencer Electronics Club. Casual conversation that allowed for a general swapping knowledge, typified meetings.

Grasping languages ... Forming ideas with artist's shakey hands

Having to forge Oklahoma winds to get to a T-building class was made a little easier by Art Club's decoration of the H-hall entrance.

Through the management of president Jeff King, sr., the Art Club overcame the school with posters and at the same time making money for the club. Black light and psychedelic posters were sold in the library.

Witnessing authentic Flamenco dances in Lawton, Oklahoma, was part of the schedule of Spanish club.

At Stillwater French Club members were on hand for folk dances and guest speakers.

Pakistan, a country devastated by earthquakes, received a helping hand from the Star-Spencer chapter of Red Cross. Aid came in the form of "ditty bags", small cloth bags filled with needed items.

School nurse, Mrs. Flossie Walker, advised and counseled members of Medical Careers as they prepared for a life in the field of medicine.

Promoting safety at school, home, and on the highway was the goal of the Safety Council. This message was conveyed through bulletin boards and inter-comm announcements.

Robed choir members took their places on the bleachers and presented their talent to the audience, a talent everyone wanted to share in, that of singing.

Programs that spotlighted Star-Spencer's choir were presented in the school auditorium "Open House Night" and right before Christmas break.

Jazz-Rock combination ... miles of coins ... new equipment bought

Playing for student Council Inter-city delegates was Star-Spencer's Stage Band, under the direction of first year teacher, Mr. Allen Butler.

"Mile of Pennies" was Stage Bands' most productive fund raising project. At both Stage and Concert Bands played, $110 was collected from on-looking Spencer residents. During the concert, Spencer police chief, Elgin Rayburn, tried his hand at directing the band.

Throughout the year, the band came up with many unique methods of raising money for sound equipment.

Morning practices . . . Long and weary hours reward musicians . . .

S-SHS band members stuck out chilly morning practices and repeatedly going over marches to present their numbers before crowds at home games.

Sporting brand-new blue and white uniforms, Star-Spencer's band performed in various contests and "Star-Spencer's Band Day", as well as during the half-time of football games.

Yonni Lillard, sr., and Robert Pratt, sr., led the band drum major-ette and major. Both accomplished musicians, Yonni played clarinet and Robert distinguished himself on the cornet.

First hour band class was rarely held in a classroom. Frequently instructions were carried out on the football field or on the lawn in front of the school.

"Oh, wow!" exclaims Yonni Lillard, drum major-ette as Robert Pratt, drum major blasts a high note on his trumpet in first hour band. Both have led the marching band onto the field during football season at half-time.

Pep rallies for support

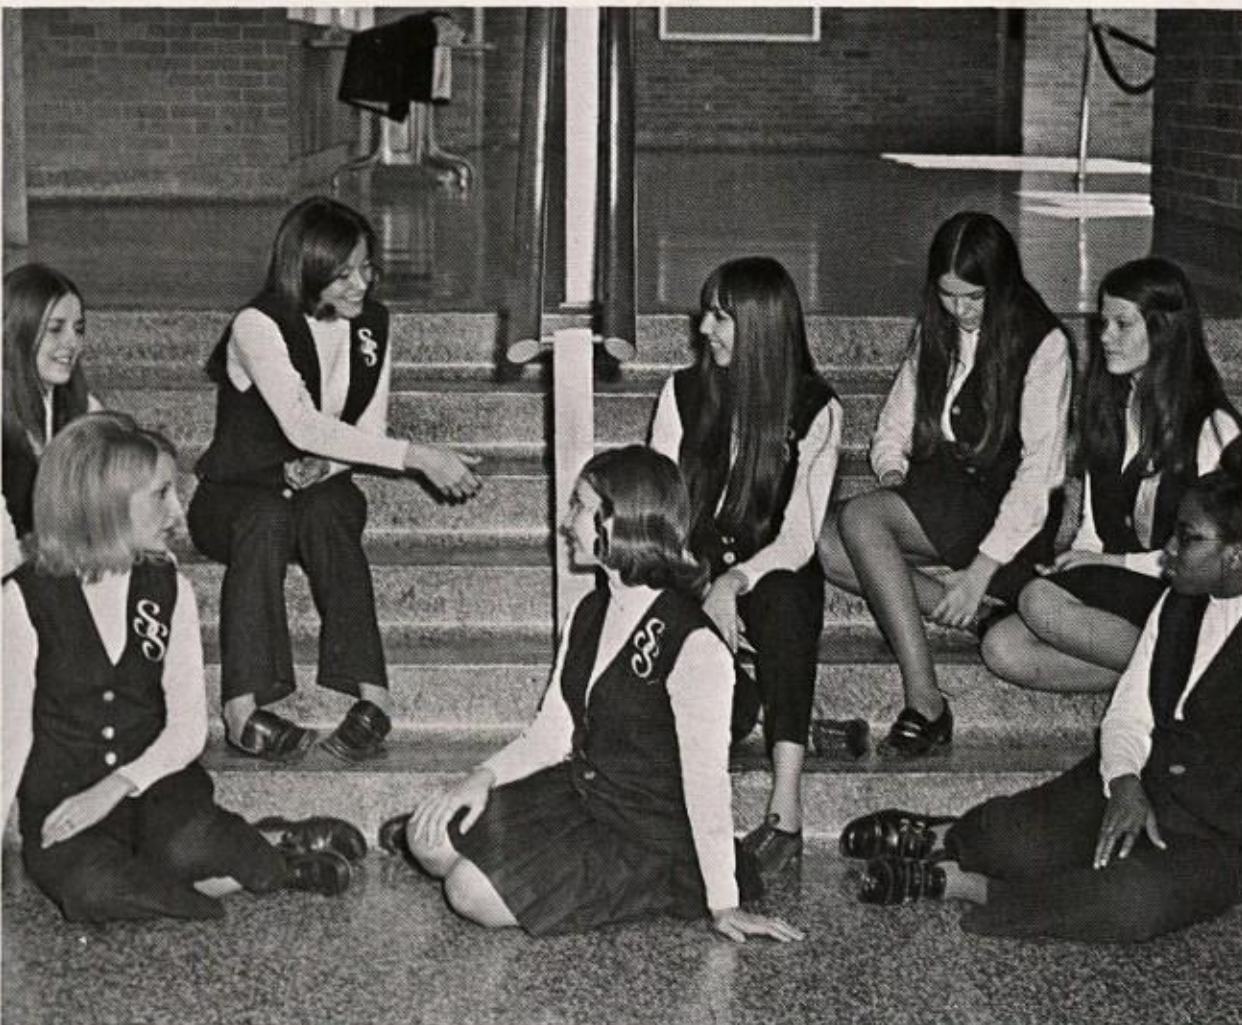

... Cheering on ...

Spirit is in a Pep Club

Muddy parking lots ruined Pep Club shoes a long time ago. But Pep Club girls forged through crowds of parents and a barrage of thermos jugs, and quilts, just to go to the games.

Light rain floating over the field caught their attention during invocation and somehow added to it. "Amen" must have been the signal for the players to come out, for at the end of prayer football boys came charging through the tunnel of girls.

Getting slacks dirty from sitting on dusty floors was worth it when Pep Club worked to "Christmas Seals". This was more than a good deed for the year, it was a way of giving Christmas a meaning for 175 young women.

Building enthusiasm ... Forever chanting yells ... Cheerleaders

They felt the enthusiasm of sports boys and they had the uncontrollable urge to win; the whole problem was transferring these feelings to the students.

Posters and pom-poms were just a few of their declarations of spirit. A main example was placing first at the Winter Cheerleading Clinic.

Sore throats and a continuous parade of bruises accompanied our cheerleaders to games and assemblies throughout the year.

Discussing events . . .

Working toward better establishment . . . plans

Making a habit of meeting every other week, the Human Relations Council talked over the events of the past and present and made plans for the future.

Each member was chosen during homeroom at the first of the year. The most interested members formed a committee called the "Steering Committee". These ten students worked with the officers in planning projects such as Black Heritage Week, February 8-12. During this week, Star-Spencer honored the black historians of the past. At the end of the week, Mr. and Miss Black Heritage, seniors David Linden and Brenda Brown, were honored by the Council at an assembly.

When our dreams
became reality,
We felt so nervous . . .
it seemed like the day would never come...
then it was there
and gone.
But during those few moments
we lived a hundred years our tears of joy and triumph our desires . . . our dreams were suddenly upon us
in one moment . . .
We led the way . . .
in friendship
and leadership and spirit and as we look back at the pictures we remember that moment . . .

PERSONALITIES

Highest grade averages ... Weekly meetings attended by Rotarians

Leader, bookworm, and a high achiever; you had to be all of these things and a little more to rate an award. The little bit more is undefineable, it wavered between personality and knowledge. Although intangible, this extra element is clearly evident in all the people.

Awards varied from Panhellenic winners to Leitsizer Medals, but all shared in the honor of being checked out of class and having their picture taken. Even through pictures and interviews the actual names of the awards were kept a secret until the "Awards Assembly". In the presence of parents and friends, students received their awards.

Happiness and joy

We all had our little kid dreams, such as being like Daddy or Santa Claus. For the majority of us, dreams fade under the weight of time or change completely.

But Patti Anderson, sr., held on to one of her dreams and on October 2, 1970, she was crowned as Star-Spencer's Homecoming Queen.

Reigning along with Patti as Queens of the sport in which they exhibited support were, Lynn Gilmore, Miss Baseball; Yonni Lilliard, Miss Wrestling; Suzanne Wood, Miss Cross-Country; Brenda Brown, Miss Basketball; and Kay Davis, Miss Track.

Giant steps taken ... reacting to the problems of groups

Bobcats had a brave new look when Mr. James E. B. Sandage came as the replacement for Dr. June Dawkins who took over the administrative duties at Northwest Classen High School.

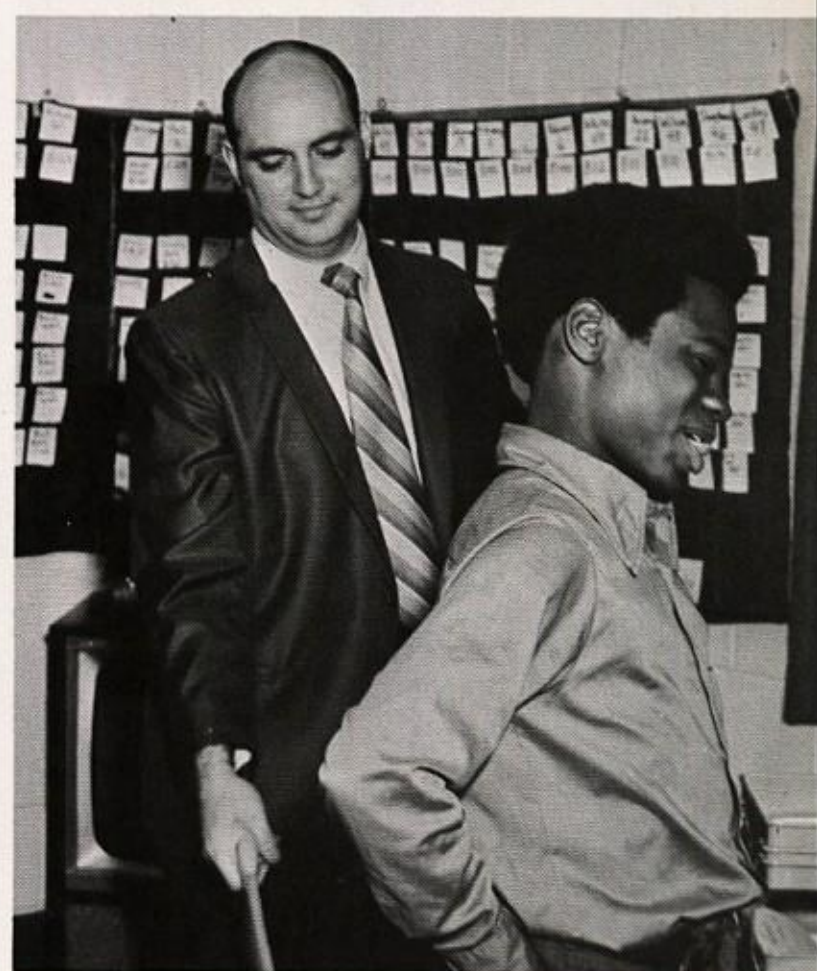

Mr. Sandage moved from Vice-Principal at John Marshall High School.

"Pride in Your School" became his motto.

Doors were always open to anyone with problems. Mr. Carl Twidwell moved from Activities Director to Vice Principal. The student who couldn't find his way to class sooner or later found his way into the office of Mr. Twidwell or Mr. Bruce Miller who this year substituted counseling for administrative responsibilities.

Fate in their hands . . . revealing knowledge by giving of their own . . .

Teachers, people who transfer ideas into the heads of students, the enactors of ideas.

Whether hated or victims of first crushes they had to stay impartial, for the future reasoning of young adults was in their hands.

A record number of new teachers took charge of the daily rituals that encompass learning such as attendance slips and recitations for staples.

Teachers unlocked unheard-of methods of instruction, throwing planning books aside to make way for independent study.

Inquiry teaching made instructors receive as much of an education as the students. Both went off on varied tangents, departing from traditional roles of "me, teacher—you student." It was a very good year.

Independent study . . . new methods . . . S-S teachers move onward

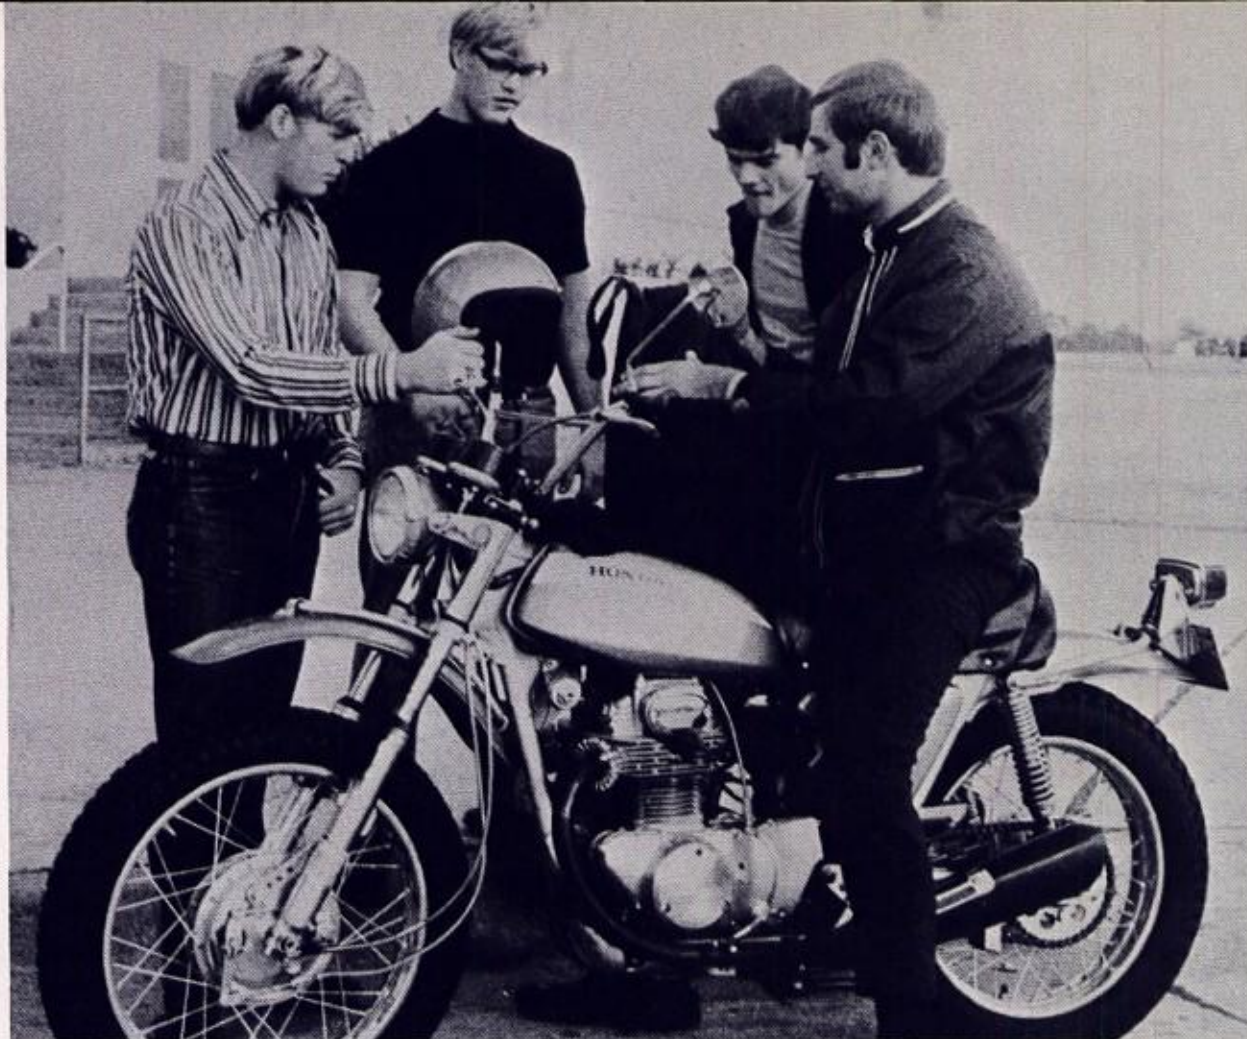

New dress codes raised staunch establishment eyebrows, but allowed more liberal-minded faculty members freedom of self-expression.

Taking time to show their school spirit, teachers proudly received the announcement that they had placed third in the homecoming parade.

Endless hours and boundless energy were spent in sponsoring organizations and attending extra-curricular activities. They were involved, they understood, they cared.

Students suddenly realized that teachers were no longer stereotypes. Individuality was uncovered, personalities were discovered, barriers were broken, unity rose.

Age differences were forgotten as students and teachers combined their efforts in making the curriculum one of the most recognized in the system. Each was proud of the others' accomplishments and recognitions as their own.

Wanting the best of students . . . liking the respect shown

Educating, guiding, and even learning was experienced by Star-Spencer's forty-eight member staff. Teaching techniques changed with emphasis placed upon each student's reasoning and judgment. Lectures and lesson plans were replaced by independent study.

Instructors grasped everything and anything to receive a spark of interest and possibly an ounce of perception.

Students wanting and asking to learn was the reward they received for their efforts. They strived to prepare the youth for their future position in life and the problems they will encounter later on.

Looking on, anxiously awaiting a home football game victory, is Coach Smith, who completed his first year at Star-Spencer after coaching at Weatherford.

Operating behind the scenes to keep the school functioning smoothly were the school secretaries.

Women in the office took care of the school records so well that they might have been taken for granted at times. The attendance office tracked down the missing student, whether he was sick, late or just mis-placed.

Thyra Vernon, financial secretary, handled the school books and also ticket sales.

The media center was developed even more by the staff of librarians.

Reaching far beyond human expectations ... seeking answers

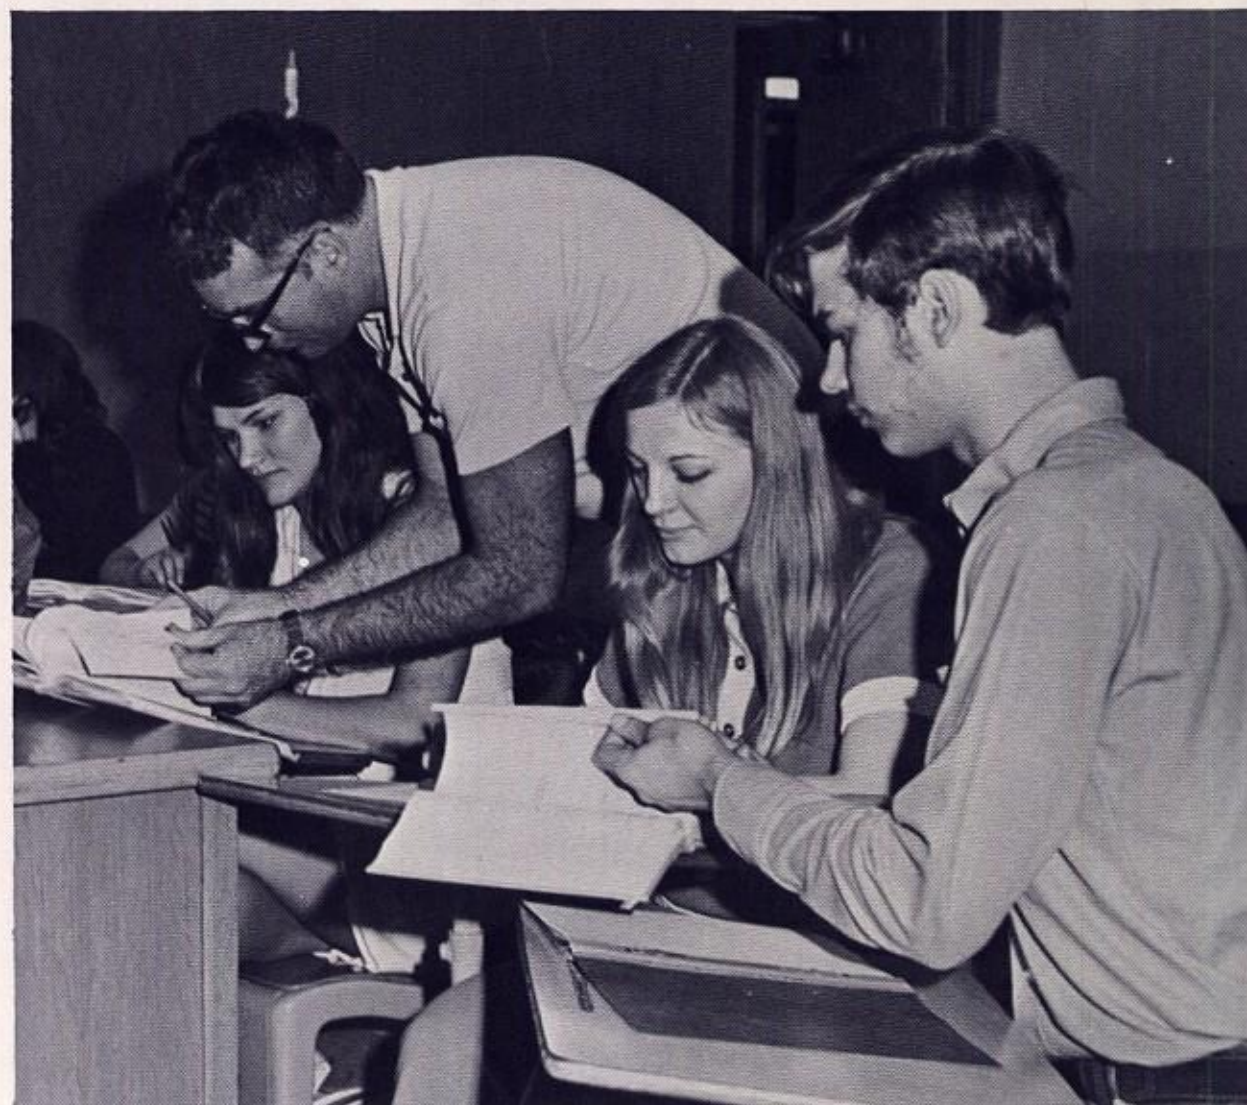

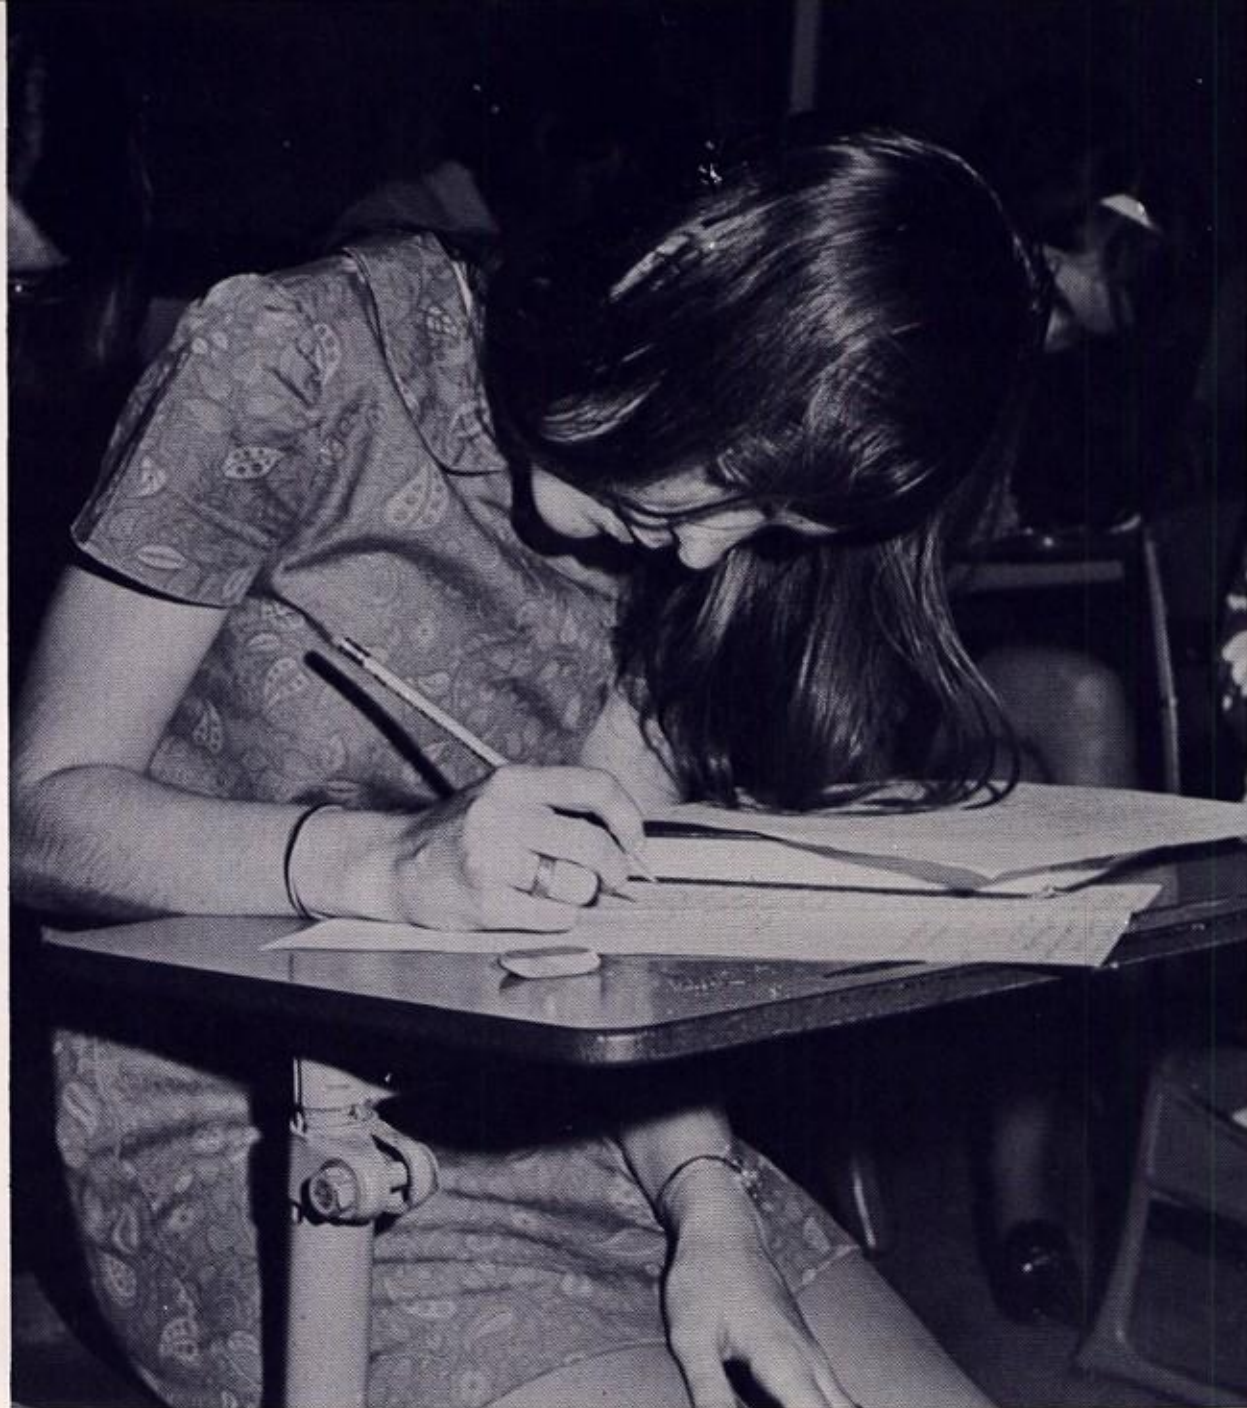

Students may have been adding a price from the sale of a dozen pencils or calculating the dimensions of a bridge, but both constitute a confrontation with math.

Advanced math students were at last able to sign up for a complete course entitled, Introductory to Calculus. This offered new challenges to pupils who had to settle for ordinary math classes prior to this.

Science students grinned and hammed up their labs quite a bit this past semester to the fact that they were being recorded by a video-tape machine. Complete with camera, tapes, and small television, the closed-circuit machine allowed students to tape their labs for playback during class lectures. Mistakes were caught and pointed out by the camera's eye.

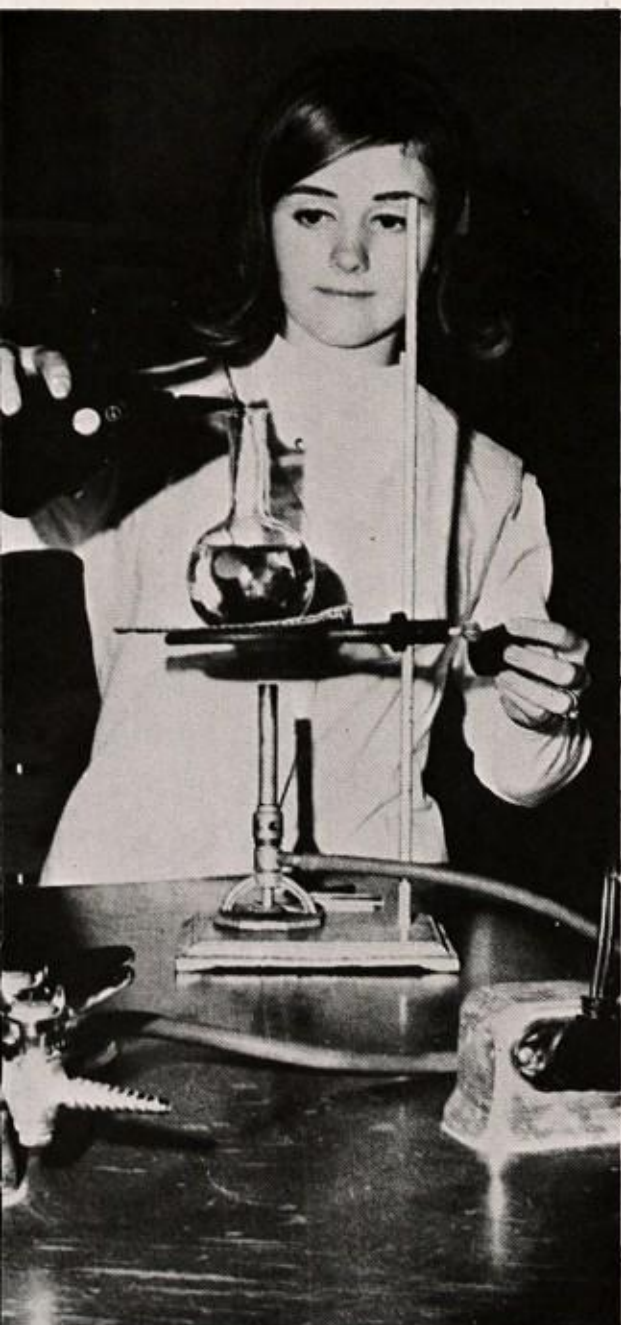

Student-to-student teaching became obvious this year with the broadening to teach. learning. Slower students received extra help with experimental instruction, to help them reach the point of wondering, as others have.

Methodical blending for gentle rythm . . . mere self-expression of ideals

It must have been scary, singing in Shepard Mall, but with a little imagination the neon walls became a hall and Star-Spencer's choir rang.

Buses, horns, pianos, voices, and prayers are the music of life, and they were here learning to express this music through instruments, robes.

Ideas that had been only sleeping in the minds of art students became part of the real world. Paper mache frogs and a woven flag, that was accidentally saluted more than once, were parts of a collage that was H104.

Pencils skimmed quickly across paper, creating something intensely personal, so personal that everyone could identify. This was where they could come and look at their feelings. This was Star-Spencer.

Gripping the steering wheel until their knuckles turned white, novice drivers enrolled in Driver's Education eased out of the parking lot. Directed on their route by Mr. McCaskill, beginning drivers quickly memorized every curve and turn in Paradise Estates. But actual driving conditions could never be as nerve racking as having a Drivo-Trainer audibly scoring every wrong move.

Vocational school gave students more than classroom instruction, it gave them a chance at real jobs. As a commercial art student, June Neal, sr., arranged and painted back drops for WKY's "Bridal Fair."

We were there to learn;
the knowledge was ours;
the time was now.
And tomorrows
were always.
We received
through giving.
We learned
through mistakes.
We found ourselves
through others.
This was our year.
The year was
our past,
our present,
and our future.
Together with others
we became one.

Practicing with Edwin Dowty are freshmen Andrew Smoot, Sherry Helms and Joan

Hodson as they work on their characters for the all-freshman play, "Rest Assured".

From Rogers to S-S ... High school as a freshman in 1970

By tracing down lists of computerized and alphabetically ordered names, Star-Spencers' new ninth graders found their homerooms. They were Freshmen and wanted desperately to belong. So began the mad rush to join clubs and an undeclared race to show loyalty.

Every charity drive, every athletic event had the support of scores of Freshmen. Part of their initiation into high school included Mr. Johnsons' Oklahoma History class. This massive auditorium class was the focal point of Freshmen society, which included standing at the doors and being called to the front row.

One main display of their energy and talents was the all Freshmen play "Stuck Pot." Auditions were held Dec. 21, under the guidance of Mr. Ed. Dowty, drama instructor.

"Bobcats are the best!"

. . . Sophomores show

spirit . . . Pride avails

Under Tam Ellis, class president, sophomores led the classes in vigor. Pep assemblies echoed their rivalry. Signs insisted, "Sophomores say, Bobcats are the Best".

One outstanding tenth grader was Mona Taylor. As head majorette for the S-SHS marching band, Mona worked on numerous unique routines, including one that involved fire batons.

Sophomores began to lead their school early in its social life and above all in spirit. Those screaming loudest at a wrestling match, track meet, or a ball game were always sure to be sophomores.

Tenth grade boys and girls were both involved in athletic programs. The Girl's Track Team was initiated just this past year.

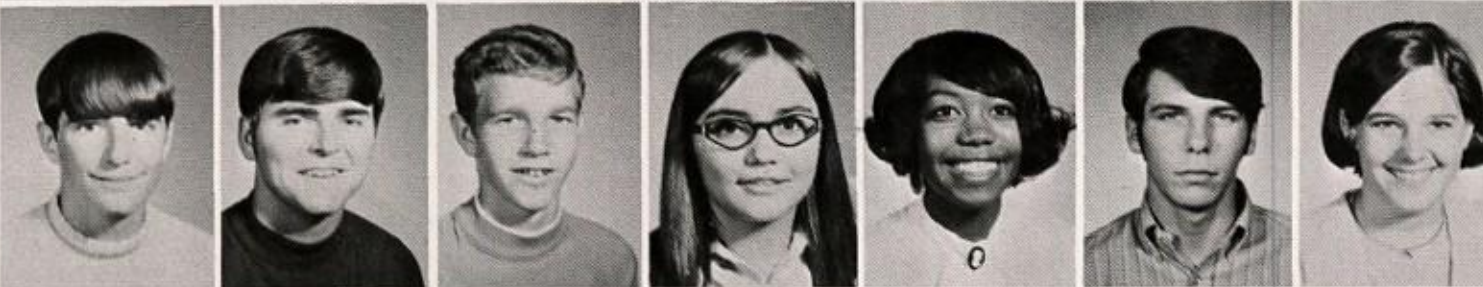

Sophomore class favorites Terry Manees and Tam Ellis spend a day at the zoo.

Prom plans in making ... P.S.A.T. initiates college preparations

Starting the year out right by placing first in Homecoming Float competition with a theme of "Sting 'Em", juniors were recognized for the industrious lot they were.

It was not too early for some to start selection of colleges and striving for entrance requirements. No more waiting to be done with gym credits, now they could start working on their lives.

After deciding and redeciding, junior class officers finally agreed upon "Fadist Five" as the band to perform at the annual Junior-Senior Prom.

In her capacity as junior class sponsor, Mrs. Nettie Metheny, supervised preparations for the prom which included selection of a band and decorating. She also supervised ordering of class rings.

Changes, enthusiasm, apathy . . . First steps toward life's path . . .

This was a transitional year, a year of immense changes, this was a senior year for 286 twelfth graders. For them the past months have been packed with spontaneous enthusiasm and as equally unmatched apathy. Now they had reached a point when looking forward meant forward to the world and the future.

Some were ready to take on the world last summer and the feeling of marking time overtook them occasionally. While others were hesitant to take that first step, all went forward on May 27, 1971.

I started thinking about all the things that change
as we grow older.
How the color of one's skin
only enhances his beauty.

How the knowledge handed down through generations
is an infinite wisdom.
How friendships
enrich your life
and closeness makes you human.

This book,
a reflection of my thoughts having to do with today's memories and perhaps tomorrow's dreams
makes me realize that . . .

I've been here before.
